"Hotwire is a good economical way for locksmiths to get started in the vehicle security sector and grow as the Hotwire system expands."

-Gale Johnson, Locksmith Ledger

"The attribute I like the most about the Hotwire is the simplicity of use, just click year/make/model and program away. Not having to worry about internet security codes is also a huge advantage. The rapidness of the software updates keeps me up to speed on the new vehicles, and the tech support is unbelievably accurate, fast, and effective."

-Stacy Hetchler, Key Pro, TX

"The programming procedures vary from manufacturer to manufacturer, but the Hotwire device makes it simple.I just love this stuff!"

-Richard Dickey, The National Locksmith

HOTWIRE™
AS A J2534 DEVICE

What is J2534?
In short, it refers to the number of the document of the SAE (Society of Automotive Engineers) standard for "Recommended Practice for Pass-Thru Vehicle Programming." The standard was developed originally as a way for the automotive aftermarket to reflash emissions related controllers due to government regulations in an effort to reduce harmful emissions. This standard was mandated in 2004, but manufacturers such as Ford, Chrysler & GM have had programming capabilities since 1996 and some even further back. As times goes by, and as J2534 matures, more and more manufacturers see J2534 doing more than just taking calibrations and diagnostics.

How does that help me?
Through manufacturer techinfo subscription programs, you can gain access to features such as module re-flashing, calibration/updates, DTC read/clear and even key and remote programming capabilities for late model vehicles. Please note that features available vary by manufacturer, and in some cases may involve an account setup with documentation requirements.

Besides being one of the easiest ways to programs remotes & keys, Hotwire is a J2534-compliant device and will generally work with manufacturers' subscription programs, unless the manufacturer specifies that they support only J2534 devices from specific companies.
